

Biography

Gonzalo Escribano

Head of the Energy and
Climate Change Program,
Elcano Royal Institute,
Spain

Director of the Energy Programme at the Elcano Royal Institute for International Studies, and professor of applied economics at the Spanish Open University (UNED). He holds a degree and a Ph.D. in Economics from the Universidad Complutense de Madrid. He has been visiting fellow at Florida State University and Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, and researcher for the Centro Español de Relaciones Internacionales at the Fundación Ortega y Gasset, having participated in the EU's VIIth Framework and H2020 Programmes and awarded the 2007 Spanish Economic and Social Council research prize. Among his most recent publications are Energy Security for the EU in the 21st Century: Markets, Geopolitics and Corridors (Routledge, New York/Oxon, 2012), and several book chapters and articles in journals like Energy Policy, Renewable and Sustainable Energy Reviews, European Journal of Political Economy, Environmental Science & Policy, Global Governance, Geopolitics, Global Policy, Turkish Studies or Mediterranean Politics.

Policy, Renewable and Sustainable Energy Reviews, European Journal of Political Economy, Environmental Science & Policy, Global Governance, Geopolitics, Global Policy, Turkish Studies or Mediterranean Politics.